

NICK COPE

"Nick Cope is the indie-surrealist kids' entertainer Robyn Hitchcock and Syd Barrett, foolishly distracted by cult status, never were." Stewart Lee 2016

Nick Cope is a professional singer and songwriter, and has over 20 years of experience in music, including international success as lead singer and songwriter with The Candyskins in the 1990s. He now writes and records music for children and has established a fanatical army of little people and their parents, from all over the world. His five CD's of original songs for children have become a must have for thousands of young families. Nick performs all over the UK at all the major art and music festivals including Edinburgh fringe and Book festival (reviews below), Hay and Cheltenham literary festival and hundreds of theatre and arts centres. He regularly spends the summer performing at (to name a few) Wilderness, Somersault, Camp Bestival, Cornbury, Wychwood, End Of The Road and travels to Hong Kong each year to the Clockenflap festival.

"Funny, profound, educational, our children have talked about everything from gravity to grieving thanks to Nick Cope's songs. Our family's favourite singer /songwriter"
